FOOD FAMINE.

The Hawaiians who live in the quarantined portion surrounded have been in a deplorable condition since they were shut off from the town proper and the fishing grounds, as many of them exist in a sort of hand to mouth manner. The result of their isolation has been that their small amount of food gave out early, and quite a number complained to the police and guards yesterday that they were without food. Captain Ashley of the National Guard has been working early and late in order to supply regular rations for the regiment and until yesterday afternoon was unable to attend to their wants.

Mrs. George Beckley representing the Hawaiian charities called upon Minister Cooper yesterday to ascertain what method was best to pursue to help the natives whose food supplies were shut off by reason of the quarantine. Minister Cooper suggested that if the matter were placed in Captain Ashley's hands he would be better equipped to reach them.

At three o'clock a wagon driven under the direction of Judge Luther Wilcox, and containing five barrels holding one thousand pounds of poi drove across Nuuanu street into Berea and halted halfway down the block. Here was gathered a crowd of natives of both sexes numbering nearly one hundred and fifty, all carrying large tin pails. They were lined up behind the wagon, and the work of distributing the welcome food was begun. A large hook scale was used and into each bucket was placed on an average, 9½ pounds of poi. As fast as buckets were filled the owners hastened away with it for they were hungry. The weighing out of the poi took up nearly an hour's time, and when the barrels were emptied many natives with buckets had not been supplied. There was no help for it as all the poi that could be found was brought down. Orders have been given so that three thousand pounds can be distributed today, which will greatly alleviate the distress among them.

Many of the men are wharf laborers and they are said to have one or two day's pay coming to them. If some means could be arrived at by which these laborers could be paid the small amount due them by their employers, their personal wants could be supplied from the stores within the district. On Tuesday night about fifteen sailors from the Mauna Loa came ashore and wandered into the infected district before the military guard was thrown around it, and in this manner they were caught within the lines and without means of any kind. Few of them have any money, and were it not for the hospitality of the Hawaiians who live there, they would have suffered considerably. There were also twenty sailors from the Noeau and eight from the Niihau who were caught and are in the same predicament. These are also without means, and are dependent so far upon the charity of their quarantined friends. If they, too, could be supplied with whatever money is due them for wages it would be a god-send to them.

Captain Ashley says the Hawaiians have asked for fish as well as poi and an endeavor will be made to supply them today or tomorrow. The Chinese and Japanese are well supplied and no complaints come from them.

OFFICIAL MATTERS.

Information by Board of Health—Orders to Sentries on Duty.

Office of the Board of Health, Honolulu, December 14th, 1899.

Plague, called also Asiatic plague, or bubonic plague, is an infectious and contagious disease, capable of communication from the affected person to another by bodily contact, and this may occur during any stage of the disease. It may also be communicated by means of the excretions from the sick, such as saliva, phlegm, sweat, and the discharges from the bowels and bladder; also by the blood and matter from abscesses and sores. The material that causes the disease is therefore likely to be contained in the clothing, dressings and bedding, etc., that have come in contact with the sick; dishes and utensils that have been used by the sick are also foul.

In order to produce its effects on the human body it must gain access to the blood, juices and soft parts of the interior, and in the great majority of cases its door of entrance is through the delicate and moist membrane of the mouth, nose, eyes, etc., or through some cut, scratch or abraded skin surface on any part of the body.

PERIOD OF INCUBATION.

The period of incubation, during which the evil remains quiet in the body and makes no sign, may be as short as two days or perhaps less, or it may continue five days or even longer; but five days is generally regarded as the limit of this period.

FIRST SYMPTOMS.

The earliest symptoms of plague, though varying somewhat in different cases, are likely to be marked by headache, a sensation of fullness in the head, dizziness, a feeling of great weariness and languor, paleness of the face, and perhaps even a staggering gait; there may also be nausea and vomiting, and perhaps diarrhoea; or the opposite condition may prevail in the bowels, that of constipation. The eyes are often bloodshot and the surface of the body may be affected with blotches and patches of a red or purple color. After a short time, varying in length from one to two days, fever may set in and swellings appear in the groin, armpit, neck or other parts of the body. Persons affected in any of these ways.
